Author Jean Bruce who had worked with the National Museums of Canada, put together this fascinating and informative book of Canadian social history post WWII , with regard to immigrants who were admitted to Canada. She quotes from the Canadian Minister of Immigration of the time, in dispatches, public and private; some of which seem shocking to modern sensibilities. Quotes from hundreds of interviews with the immigrants; war brides from Britain , refugees and displaced persons from all countries in Europe, including Germany and Holland, and later, Asia, create a picture of Canada at a vibrant period of history which was to change the face of the nation forever. The photographs tell the tale - war brides smiling nervously at the train stations, waiting for their husbands to pick them up in the new land; workers on farms and in factories across the country; lumberjacks and sawmill workers in British Columbia; construction workers on Yonge Street working on the Toronto subway in 1950 ; and drilling operations in Taber , Alberta ; and working on the Trans Canada highway construction in Saskatchewan ; working in the textile industry in Montreal ; working on dam construction near Trail...
